

Aviation Tourism Destinations

Northwest Territories (North Slave Region)

The Northwest Territories is a spectacular destination for aviation tourism offering unlimited opportunities for adventure in the vast northern wilderness. Yellowknife serves as a convenient gateway for excursions into the surrounding North Slave region of the Northern Territories. The Northwest Territories Flying Association (COPA Flight 108) encourages visiting floatplane pilots to explore our numerous lakes and experience bush flying at its best. See below for a few suggestions for unforgettable northern aviation excursions.

Thaidene Nene National Park Reserve

Visit Thaidene Nene National Park Reserve where subarctic boreal forest and barrens meet the rugged cliffs and pristine waters of Great Slave Lake. Aircraft access is regulated by Parks Canada and requires an aircraft access permit acquired in advance.

NWTFA "Places to Fly"

Peruse the "Places to Fly" page on the NWTFA website for profiles of a few of the favorite destinations of local floatplane pilots. Each profile provides photos and detailed description of the destination together with its coordinates and tips for access by floatplane.

Wilderness Lodges

Enjoy the unique visitor experience provided by the many remote wilderness lodges in the North Slave region. Most fly-in lodges offer comfortable accommodations and excellent meals. Activities include guided fishing, nature photography, hiking and boating.

Sport Fishing

Explore the world-class fishing opportunities offered by Great Slave Lake and the many other lakes and rivers in the North Slave region. Sport fishing species include lake trout, walleye, northern pike and arctic grayling.
